SIGHTS AROUND THE CITY . . .

Barry Goldwater Jr. playing baseball in a fuschia T-shirt emblazoned "Love Is Hell Too, but It's Much More Fun to Make than War." (He hit three balls to right field, and his team won over Democrat Rep. Charles Wilson's Charlies Angels, 17-7) . . . Monday night in the Saks Fifth's menswear department: House Whip John Brademas jumping in and out of all these super suits, on sale. Mary Ellen Briggs, his blonde fiancée, coordinating. And then, darlings, Mary Ellen stretched flat as a cat on the floor, helping the tailor turn up the bottoms. They have to be ready by July 7. Ear is getting sniffly again . . . That Certain Southern Senator, having his hair done every single day in the Senate Beauty Shop. (The barbers in the barbershop Wonder Why, as it looks terrible) . . . Stansfield Turner striding down the halls of the CIA like the lead craft in an armada. Ear hears that a status-aware aide has decreed: When Stan walks down the halls, inferiors must not barge by him, but stay in line . . . Tomorrow: Idi Amin's memoirs, Part III.
